

For this weeks recreate we look at the poet, film maker and artist Marcel Broodthaers. It wasn't until he turned 40 that he started to focused on art and had his first exhibition. His work always retained a poetic quality and sense of humour, he often used discarded object to make sculptures which frequently included eggshells. In 1965, he wrote: 'All is eggs. The world is an egg. The world is born of the great yolk, the sun.'

You can try to recreate exactly as it is, or take inspiration and recreate your own version!