

Community Health and Wellbeing Worker Apprenticeship

Level 3

15 months

Collaborate with individuals and communities to identify and address health and wellbeing needs, promote health, prevent illness, and reduce health inequalities.

Apprenticeship overview

Community Health and Wellbeing Workers operate across various organisations, including those funded by local government, the NHS, and voluntary sectors. Their primary role is to work with individuals and communities to identify and address health and wellbeing needs, prevent illness, and reduce inequalities. Taking a holistic approach, they consider physical, mental, emotional, and social factors. They build on community strengths, connect people to local services, identify service gaps, and develop relationships with local groups. Their work supports national efforts to tackle the root causes of poor health and promote long-term wellbeing across diverse populations.
